Table footnotes:

1 Indicates the mean score for all students in the summation or “overall” category for instructor performance for which all universities use a 5-point likert scale where 1 represents “poor” performance and 5 represents “excellent” performance. Student evaluation data from all courses taught at Florida International University are unavailable.

2 Abnormally low evaluation results from one of six responding students scoring especially low, as is evidenced by both the median and modal scores of 5.0.

3 This course was crosslisted for Women’s Studies and Sociology majors. Reviews are given respectively.

4 396 students represent one lecture and 12 discussion sections, 10 taught by TAs. These evaluations represent only the two sections for which I was both instructor and discussion leader (approximately 33 students each section).
