Biography

Jennifer R. Wolgemuth (Ph.D., Colorado State University, post-doc Charles Darwin University) is Associate Professor (tenured and promoted Fall 2018) of Measurement and Research in the College of Education at the University of South Florida. She teaches doctoral level qualitative research methods courses, supervises doctoral student dissertations, and is Director of the Graduate Certificate in Qualitative Research and Interdisciplinary Education Ph.D. programs. She specializes in the evaluation and development of qualitative research, particularly qualitative interviews and systematic reviews, and has amassed over 60 publications in prominent journals such as Educational Researcher, Qualitative Inquiry, Qualitative Research, and Qualitative Health Research. Her research focuses on ethics and validity in education and social science research. Drawing on critical, poststructural, and new materialist theories, she explores inquiry as an agential process that investigates and creates lives and communities to and for which the researcher is responsible. Dr. Wolgemuth is Chair of the American Educational Research Association's Qualitative Research SIG and served as President of the Florida Educational Research Association, the Executive Editor of the Florida Journal of Educational Research, and Senior Editor for The Qualitative Report. She is co-editor of Inquiring-Together: Philosophical Mentoring in Qualitative Inquiry (Routledge) and is currently co-editing Expanding approaches to thematic analysis: Creative engagements with qualitative data (under contract with Routledge).
